EMPLOYMENT LAW E-BULLETIN - January 2025

Happy New Year and welcome to our January e-bulletin. The Employment Rights Bill will be centre stage this year even though most of its provisions will not take effect until 2026. There are though quite a few important changes to watch out for and our blog on what to expect in employment law in 2025 will keep you up to speed with the key developments. As usual we also cover all the latest employment law issues, including case reports providing guidance on protected conversations and how accents can be related to race for harassment purposes. We also cover clawback provisions to recoup costs associated with sponsoring a migrant worker.

There is still time to book for our first Essential Employment Law Webinar of 2025. Our webinar on What to Expect in Employment Law in 2025 takes place on 9 January and there is plenty to talk about. For details on how to book for this and our other upcoming webinars see below.

PREPARING FOR THE BILL: TEN PRACTICAL STEPS

We continue to have a lot of interest from employers in relation to this practical half-day training course on the Employment Rights Bill. This training course is aimed at HR and business leaders and will explain the 10 practical steps that we consider employers can take now in order to prepare for the new legislation, as well as the new ethnicity and disability pay reporting requirements expected within the Equality (Race and Disability) Bill.

This training course will be tailored specifically to your organisation and we will take a deep dive into the detail of the key reforms proposed within the Employment Rights Bill that are most important to you, as well as clarifying the expected timings so that you can prioritise the changes which will likely be introduced first.

To enquire about this training course, which we can deliver in-person or online for your organisation, please get in touch with your usual MFMac contact or email innes.clark@mfmac.com.
